Alex:

The 28th works better. I'll be on travel on 9/27.

Dan Jiron has returned to Forest Service after serving as Acting U/S for Natural Resources and Environment. Jim Hubbard has been confirmed and is now in that role (Amanda Lockwood is his administrative person). Please include Jim in future correspondence. Kristi Boswell will be covering this issue for OSEC and would also like to be looped in. I've cc'ed both of them.

Thanks,

Subject: Biomass Response to Congress

Hi All:

Long overdue, but attached is the draft biomass letter (redline with comments and clean version) in response to the 2017 appropriations language with agency comments incorporated. Please review and reply all if you have any feedback. For awareness, once everyone signs off on the language our program staff indicated the letter will need to go through OMB before signature. Let's plan to set up a call once everyone has had a chance to review. Would next week work? Or the week of the 24th? Please let Alex know your preference and we will set something up.

Best,
Mandy

Subject: Aircraft PM

Hey Christina,

Are you looped into the attached? We are preparing comments, but have been told there is a hard deadline by end of today (so now) to get our comments back to FAA. Below is short summary from our career team. I want to cross-check with you before we send anything over. Give me a call if it's easier to discuss: 202-306-8538.

Best,
Mandy

Summary from EPA Career Team:

Our aircraft team spoke today with our colleagues at FAA regarding the development of a U.S. position paper for ICAO on future PM standards. It sounds like the career team from FAA has received the approval from the FAA & DOT leadership to circulate the paper within the U.S. stakeholders, through the "Interagency Group on International Aviation" (IGIA). IGIA includes representation from the State Department, the Department of Defense, the aircraft/airlines industry, and also some environmental groups (I believe it includes ICCT and EDF).

Attached is the current draft from FAA. The FAA/DOT leadership would like them to circulate this paper within the IGIA group starting tomorrow. There will be an opportunity for IGIA members to provide comments to FAA. Then the U.S. Government, through FAA, can submit a formal paper to ICAO for the February 2019 CAEP meeting.

Here are some of the highlights/key issues from the draft paper:

- "The United States supports a decision to adopt an nvPM emissions standard for aircraft engines based on the CAEP analysis and in accordance with the CAEP Terms of Reference. To this end, we support selecting a stringency level for the standard that is based on an assessment of environmental benefit, technological feasibility, and cost effectiveness, and that takes into account interdependencies with other emissions and noise."
- "In-Production Engines: The United States supports the anti-backsliding in-production stringency lines for both nvPM mass and nvPM number, with an applicability date of January 1, 2023."

- “New Type Engines: The United States supports a new type engine standard with an applicability date of January 1, 2025. For the purposes of this position paper, we are not yet in a position to propose a preferred stringency option.”
- “Based on our observations of the CAEP Main Analysis described in section 2, we recognize that SO4 through SO9 are technologically feasible, economically reasonable, and environmentally beneficial.”

The paper also summarizes the technical work performed both by the CAEP Working Groups (which both EPA and FAA participated in), as well as technical assessments done by the US Government.

Note that this paper does NOT take a position on a specific level of stringency – instead the US Gov’t acknowledges that Stringency Options 4 through 9 are all feasible.

At this point, I'd think it would be a good idea for you to meet with Bill Wehrum to discuss the issue directly with him. I'll forward your contact info to his scheduling team and they will follow up to schedule a time.

Juan,

It was good talking to you today. Thank you for the education and this information. I am engaging internally and we will hopefully be in a point to schedule a discussion between our agencies soon. I'll let you know the moment I hear of any concerns, but right now I am aware of none and I am optimistic that this is simply a question of direction, resources, and follow-through.

Best,

Justin

Subject: Noise Control Act

Hi Juan,

Yes. This is the most recent version of the memo, which we transmitted to EPA staff in June. With respect to your question about the proposed approach from a rulemaking standpoint, I think we want to move forward through a joint rulemaking. A joint rulemaking is probably the more efficient process and it prevents the possibility of one rule getting held up while the other one continues to proceed (which could theoretically happen if each agency tried to pursue separate, although concurrent rulemakings).

We can provide more information about the intent of the rulemaking but here are a few bullets summarizing the issue:

- The Noise Control Act of 1972 requires EPA to promulgate regulations setting the standards (40 CFR part 201) for noise emissions from railroad equipment and facilities and requires FRA to enforce those standards (49 CFR part 210).
- The emissions and measurement standards have proven appropriate for conventional speed rail operations; however, they are not suitable for high-speed rail (HSR) operations at speeds above ~160 mph. In particular, new technologies such as maglev will likely exceed EPA standards due to high-speed aerodynamic noise. Aerodynamic noise caused by such high-speed operations was not considered in the development of the existing regulations.
- Amending the EPA and FRA regulations would remove a regulatory barrier to high-speed rail operations and use of new technologies.
 - Operations over approximately 160 mph would not comply with the current regulations because of the aerodynamic noise, and
 - Equipment manufacturers have represented that they are unable to build high-speed train equipment that will comply with existing regulations.

The approach described in the attached memo would minimize the changes to EPA's regulations, while still reducing the regulatory burden on future high-speed rail operations.

Please let me know if you have any additional questions. Thanks.

Subject: RE:

Deliberative Process / Ex. 5

We understand the need to highlight the benefits of biomass, and believe that message will remain in the letter even without this sentence. DOE and EPA both want the sentence removed. The paragraph that follows does a good job touting the economic and environmental benefits (see below). Because the underlying analysis of that sentence didn't take into account job losses and reduction of GDP by shrinking fossil fuel-related industries, it would still be quite challenging to come up with a sentence that isn't misleading or downright false. And, in terms of process, we are not in a position to conduct the necessary wordsmithing. The letter has already cleared OMB, and unfortunately, this misleading sentence somehow made it through. We need to just strike it and move along.

Can we agree to strike it and get the letter wrapped up?

Thanks,
Matthew

The interagency approach to biomass energy provided by forests and other lands and sectors will be guided by an appreciation that forests and other lands and sectors are managed to provide multiple environmental, social, and economic benefits to our communities, while simultaneously contributing to U.S. energy independence and job creation. Maintaining healthy forests can bring jobs and stimulate investments in rural communities through the forests products sector, pulp and paper production, biomass power plants, combined heat and power facilities, and through small businesses providing fuelwood. Biomass removed during thinning and fuel treatment operations can be used to generate renewable energy, while simultaneously reducing the risk to forests from insects, disease, and fires. This aspect of forest management is especially important for our western forests that continue to be faced with historic wildfire activity and forests across the country battling insect and disease epidemics. Forests and other lands also support outdoor recreation and tourism, bringing much needed income to rural communities. This type of economic stimulus allows rural communities to invest more in sustaining the ecosystems that support these communities and local industries.

Bill,

I've been able to connect with our chief environmental economist, Al McGartland, and he agrees that the whole sentence should be removed. Our political management, namely Mandy Gunasekara, also agrees that it should be removed. The underlying analysis did not consider the substitution effect on the economy (i.e. coal, oil, and gas-related energy production would go down and there would be job losses and GDP contraction from a shift to biomass) so it's misleading to claim the benefits.

Can I get your concurrence on removing the sentence?

Thanks,

Matthew

Kristi, Bill,

I hope you're doing well, and I'm sorry to be contacting you about content of the letter at this late stage. Even though the text has been cleared by OMB and interagency review, DOE is asking that the following sentence be struck from the second paragraph on the second page:

"By 2040, a billion-ton economy could create over 1.1 million new jobs, increase annual U.S. GDP by $260 billion, and reduce annual greenhouse gas emissions by 450 million tons of CO2 equivalent."

According to DOE, DOE and USDA previously decided to remove those statistics from the draft Bioeconomy Initiative report for the Biomass R&D Board, which DOE and USDA co-chair and of which EPA is also a member. DOE and EPA were concerned that the figure did not represent net jobs. It is unclear whether the concern is present in all of the statistics in that sentence; my contact at DOE is attempting to run that to ground. The initial request from DOE was for the whole sentence to be removed.

So, I'm checking in with folks here on that, and I wanted to give you all the opportunity as well. Would you be okay with that sentence being removed? I believe I can adjust the formatting so that the signature page can remain unchanged to accommodate the text change without having to go through signature again.

Please let me know what you and your colleagues think.

Thanks,
Matthew

Long overdue, but attached is the draft biomass letter (redline with comments and clean version) in response to the 2017 appropriations language with agency comments incorporated. Please review and reply all if you have any feedback. For awareness, once everyone signs off on the language our program staff indicated the letter will need to go through OMB before signature. Let's plan to set up a call once everyone has had a chance to review. Would next week work? Or the week of the 24th? Please let Alex know your preference and we will set something up.

Thanks Hayley. I also talked to Dany about the next iteration of the Chair Summary. He said this was not a negotiated text, but that they would share almost final draft with us after session 4. I told him we need to see Chair Summary again before closing session, because it would dictate the direction of our Minister's remarks which we hope could be positive.

For session 1, I just went through Kim and my proposed edits and deletions with the Canadians (Dany). He didn't have a computer so was writing my comments down; he also has a photo of our edits.

Canada is balancing our comments with the EU's, which Canada says are diametrically opposite ours. They told us to expect that they can't take all our edits on, so we will need to see what their next iteration looks like and if there are any red lines for us.

We agreed that Kim or I will step out of session 4 to look at the next iteration Canada produces. We should expect to simultaneously provide edits to session 3 as soon as the Canadians produce that section. (I imagine this will be the same process for session 2, though hopefully with less contentious content.)

As Jane shared yesterday morning, Canada's goal is to have a final chair's summary basically as soon as session 4 ends.

Subject: Alejandra shows the human cost of these immigration policies

Every day, families like Alejandra's are being torn apart. Our government has failed them.

FWD.us

Mandy,

Have you heard about the case of Alejandra Juarez? Alejandra came to the United States as a teenager 20 years ago. She's built the life she always dreamed of: raising two U.S. citizen daughters and supporting her husband when he deployed to Iraq as a member of the Florida National Guard.

But on August 3rd, despite working with 28 different lawyers to try and earn legal status and receiving an outpouring of community support, Alejandra will be deported to a country she hasn't seen in two decades.

Alejandra will have to move her entire life -- as well as her young daughter -- to Mexico, a country where she has no ties or support system, while her other daughter must remain in the U.S. working to support her father. It's heartbreaking news at a time when the Trump administration is separating more and more families.

But this is one family separation we might be able to stop because families belong together. Representative Darren Soto just introduced a bill to the House Judiciary Committee that would prevent Alejandra's deportation, which has allowed Alejandra's legal team to file a new stay of removal request with ICE. We have to come together now and urge ICE to grant her new request before time runs out.

Call ICE's Miami field office right now. Urge them to grant Alejandra's new request for a stay of removal while the House Judiciary Committee considers a bill that would keep her family together.

This administration isn't just responsible for ripping children away from their parents seeking asylum at the border. They are also tearing apart families living right here in the U.S.

Our broken immigration system provides no chance for the wife of a United States Marine and mother to two United States citizen daughters to get in line and earn United States citizenship herself. Every day, families like Alejandra's are being torn apart because our government, at every level, has failed them.

Alejandra's deportation is a terrible reminder of the devastating human cost of this administration's immigration policies. We must show that we will stand up for people like Alejandra and her family.

Alejandra's deportation date is less than a month away. Call the ICE field office in Miami now, and urge them to grant Alejandra's new request for a stay of removal.

No one is safer, stronger, or more secure because Alejandra is being slated for deportation. But our families, communities, and our country lose an important piece of ourselves when we rip parents away from their children.

Thank you,

PACCAR Displays Innovative Electric and Hydrogen Fuel Cell Trucks at CES 2019

January 8, 2019, Bellevue, Washington –PACCAR is participating in the CES 2019 show in Las Vegas, Nevada during the week of January 7. CES is one of the world's largest showcases for the latest in technological innovation. PACCAR is exhibiting three zero emission vehicles: a battery-electric Peterbilt Model 579EV; a battery-electric Peterbilt Model 220EV; and a hydrogen fuel cell electric Kenworth T680 developed in collaboration with Toyota. These trucks were designed for a range of customer applications, including over-the-road goods transportation, port operations and urban distribution.

Visitors are welcome to climb aboard the trucks and explore these advanced powertrains at PACCAR's booth, near the Westgate monorail station. In addition, visitors to the booth can learn about other innovative PACCAR technologies that increase customers' operational efficiency, such as next generation driver assistance systems, truck platooning and in-cab human-machine interfaces.

Kenworth, Peterbilt and DAF are leaders in the development of alternative powertrain commercial vehicles. Kenworth, Peterbilt and DAF are field-testing battery-electric, hydrogen fuel cell and hybrid powertrain vehicles with customers in North America and Europe. "PACCAR is excited about the opportunity to create the next generation of powertrains that are environmentally-friendly and enhance our customers' operations," said Landon Sproull, PACCAR vice president.

Kyle Quinn, PACCAR chief technology officer, noted, "PACCAR is investing in the latest technology across its portfolio of industry-leading products and services. The PACCAR Innovation Center in Silicon Valley, California enhances the company's access to emerging technologies and talent from around the world. CES is an outstanding forum to showcase PACCAR's advanced engineering leadership."

Emily and Delaney,

We would like to request a meeting with Mr. Wehrum at his convenience in the next couple of weeks to discuss the upcoming reset to the Renewable Fuel Standard. It would likely be myself, a couple of my Growth Energy colleagues, and possibly one or two others from one of our outside firms. Thank you in advance for your consideration and please let me know what may work.

Ha. Just noticed below I got autocorrected "Andy" instead of Mandy.
Sorry about that.

Wanted to touch base on the below. As noted I'm trying to learn where things stand with the bio intermediate rulemaking, if there were plans to move forward anytime so and if so some sense of timing.

Am hoping you might be able to connect me with the right person handling this at EPA. No advocacy, just trying to get a sense of things.

Thanks.

Any guidance or insight would be very much appreciated.

Thank you.

I hope that all is well with you. It would be an understatement to say a lot has happened since we met back in May.

I am trying to run down a question for one of my colleagues and was hoping you might be able to provide some insight or point me to the right person at the EPA.

The question is on the status of the bio-intermediate rulemaking at the EPA. I'm running pretty thin on the subject but my understanding is the EPA initiated a rule making process back in 2016 but the process stalled. I'm trying to ascertain what the status and timing might be for going forward and whether the EPA believes it would be necessary to restart the process or whether it would be possible to finalize a rulemaking based on comments received back in the 2016 process.

I know you must be very busy and any guidance or insight would be very much appreciated,

Thank you.

Subject: Ex-EPA chief Pruitt got big legal fund donation from Wisconsin billionaire

By Zack Colman

12/06/2018 04:45 PM EDT

Former EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt, who left the agency in July under a cloud of scandals, received $50,000 from a wealthy conservative businesswoman for his legal defense fund, according to his final financial disclosure report released Thursday.

The donor, self-made billionaire Diane Hendricks of Beloit, Wis., was also a major donor to President Donald Trump's campaign, which named her one of its economic advisers, and she contributed heavily to Republican Wisconsin Gov. Scott Walker's campaigns.

EPA ethics official Justina Fugh wrote in the filing that Pruitt did not seek advice from the agency before accepting Hendricks' contribution, which was "believed to be in cash."

Pruitt faced a number of allegations before he resigned in July, and he started a legal defense fund to raise money in the months before his departure. The filing showed that he owed between $115,000 and $300,000 in legal bills, although that was the same amount from 2017 and it is unclear how much carried over to the most recent filing.

The filing also showed Pruitt sold off between $49,000 and $210,000 in holdings in the first few months of 2018. Pruitt had expressed financial concerns about maintaining a home in Oklahoma while also renting a residence in the Eastern Market neighborhood of Washington, D.C.

Pruitt's wife, Marlyn, reported income of $54,166 through consulting via an LLC she runs. The former EPA boss had faced criticism for what was perceived to be using his office to obtain a Chick-fil-A franchise for his wife.

Hi Mandy!

Yes, I made it back late Saturday and am mostly readjusted, though I'm always surprised how long it takes for just those few hours! Please find attached my very rough notes from the bilats I sat in on. We don't plan to do anything with these notes so hopefully they'll help with your readout. Please let me know if you have any questions and have a very happy holiday!

Hey Hannah,

I hope you've made it back and successfully readjusted to EST. Thank you again for all of your help in the making the trip a success from epas perspective.

I'm working on some readout points and want to cross check your notes with mine. Can you send me your notes from the bilateral discussions we attended together?

Give me a call if that's easier.

Best,
